DETAILED ACTION

1. Claim 156 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

There is no antecedent basis for the phrase in claim 156 "said regions of relatively low liquid resistivity".

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 145-151, 153, 155, 157-166 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Osborn, III et al. (U.S. 5,647,862).

Art Unit: 1772

Osborn '862 teaches the use of an absorbent strip to transport liquid to places where it can penetrate a fluid directing strip (which is at least partially impermeable or resistant to liquid) and be absorbed into an absorbent layer (abstract). The absorbent strip may comprise capillary channel fibers (col. 9, lines 1-2). The instant invention claims use of a capillary system to distribute liquid and a resistance layer under the distribution layer. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill of the art to have selected capillary fibers from those taught by Osborn '862. It would further have been obvious to orient the fluid direction layer and perforate it at desired locations in order to direct fluid to particular locations in a given absorbent application. Regarding claim 153, capillary channel fiber bundles should have a high rate of fluid transfer per unit weight of fiber.

4. Claim 156 would be allowable if rewritten to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, set forth in this Office action and to include all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

5. Claim 152 is allowed.

Art Unit: 1772

6. Claim 154 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

7. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: there is no suggestion in Osborn '862 to use the particular type of fiber bundle, specified in claims 152 and 154, in combination with the other recited limitations of claims 152 and 154.

8. Applicant's arguments filed 24 January 2002 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Osborn, II et al. does not teach a bundle of parallel fibers. The examiner first notes that not all of the pending claims have limitations directed to parallel fibers. Most simple require that the liquid be transported parallel to the top layer, which Osborn, III et al. teaches, since the liquid is distributed along the length of the liquid transport means to the ends of the absorbent core. Regarding the ones that do claim capillary channel fibers, transport in these fibers, is known to be in channels that run along the length of the fibers. It would therefore have been obvious to orient the long axis of each of these fibers in a common desired direction, such as the end of the absorbent core, as taught by Osborn, II et al., in order to better transport fluid in that direction.

9. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
